

His Excellency.—Ladies and gentlemen, I suppose you will expect me to say a few words after the pointed reference which has been made to me by the Dean in his most able and instructive speech. First, I think I ought to thank the Dean on your behalf for his able address; and secondly, I must thank the ladies in the name of the whole body of this college for your attendance here to-day. Although the Dean has referred to a feeling of apathy in reference to this College, I look on this attendance, in view of the heat of the weather and other circumstances, as very large and representative, and I trust it is a good augury of better things. The college, by sending forth these young men into the midst of Calais, to do such good work, will surely enlist your sympathies on behalf of this institution. There is no one here who is so nearly connected with Christianity as the medical profession, for the same characteristics are shown by medical men and by Christ himself—pity, sympathy, and love; and these are the feelings, I am sure, which induce or ought to induce these youngmen to persevere in the difficult work on which they have entered to-day. I do not know very much of the past history of this institution, except what I gathered from the Dean's address; but I think that such sanguine and ardent students look a very deep interest in it, and I trust I may be found not less interested; I trust that in the words of the Dean, I shall have shown "a very tangible interest." (Loud cheers.) In the last few words of his address the Dean certainly laid upon my shoulders a very great responsibility, in fact he put the institution, I may say, on my back entirely—(laughter and applause)—though he expects that I shall meet with difficulties. But I do not anticipate myself, others probably from the members of the General Council, and from the Unofficial members of the Legislative Council—months—(loud applause.)—the stability—(loud applause.)—of the people in the town, for £250,000, £50,000, and so on; when I left, there was surplus revenue of £50,000 for the year. (Applause.) It was much the same in Barbadoes, and very similar in Trinidad, but thanks to God I overcame the difficulties, and I trust that by the exercise of economy and good Government before I leave the charming shores of Hongkong, I may be in a position to announce to the Government of this Colony that I have been granted this collection of £250,000 by the unanimous Legislative Council. (Cheers.) In a matter of this sort I prefer to leave the purse strings in the hands of the Unofficials. I have no doubt we could carry the vote for this endowment by the Government majority, but in dealing with finance I have never taken advantage of a Government majority, never spent money which has not been made by a majority of Unofficials. Money (cheers, hearty.) Therefore we can win the sympathies of Mr. Whithead, and I have Mr. Bellairs and Dr. Ho Kuei, and I think also Mr. Carter—we shall certainly have the £200,000 as soon as we can afford it. (Applause.) There is nothing more for me to say, except to congratulate the students on having earned the prizes presented to them, and also—the licentiate of the Government—on having passed with honours the examinations. You have, young men, very great sample before you in Dr. Livingstone of whom, of course, you have all heard. The great idea of his life was to come to China, the largest sale for machinery and medicine

Mr. Francis:—I beg to second the proposal, although I am sure there is not least necessity to do so, as it would be carried unanimously, seconded or not. We owe a most hearty vote of thanks to His Excellency for his kindness in making the proposal, and for the assistance he has made us, that whatever he can do he will do for the benefit of this institution. I think you will all agree with me in saying—I may say it for you boldly, that this vote of thanks is nothing, compared with the vote of thanks which we are prepared to give him. If at the end of his career in this Colony he has also the satisfaction of being he has rendered so restoring the Colony to a sound financial condition. (Loud applause.)

His Excellency:—It seems hardly necessary for me to say more than that I am extremely obliged to you for the vote of thanks which has been carried so heartily. I have made several promises this morning and so dare not make any more, but I feel I have a duty to perform them, but those who I have made I shall certainly endeavour to carry out. (Applause.)

The proceedings then terminated.

The concert was opened by the band of the Shropshire Regiment, which played an overture of popular music in its well known popular style. Mr. F. Lammert sang two songs in a voice which needs a little sandpaper, though not much; and Mrs. K. Jell, recalled after stinging "The song that reached my heart," gave "Annie Laurie" and later "The Tollers." Mrs. Kjeller was hardly strong enough to fill such a large room, but was otherwise very satisfactory. Mr. Gregson "spoke a peace," as Artemus Ward would say, in very funny style, and Mr. A. J. Nye also recited in a manner that was not too reminiscent of the famous "Imperial William Nye. Lieut. Gratton gave a very pretty and well executed solo, slightly marred by a difference of opinion between his instrument and the piano as to the pitch. The life of the entertainment, however, was Mr. South, who seems to have an inexhaustible store of comic songs. His "Down went the Captain," with a chorus of boys, was a phenomenal success, and his burlesque band, with the same assistance, was equally original and funny. After singing "English as she is spoke," Mr. South in response to an undeniable recall warbled a touching ballad about his attachment to a sweet little Italian (hailing from Cork) who turned the handle of a piano, and ate up the cork. Mr. South is most valuable acquisition to the singing, and can hardly appear too often for complete.

The old lady died last November and was buried as usual on the side of a neighbouring hill in the ordinary place. When the remains had been consigned to the earth, the man turned to his wife and said, "I will not leave the grave for three years, and so far he has been true to his word. The neighbours took upon themselves to provide for him, a subscription list was started, ten pence of rice being contributed by his relatives and friends, and the man himself. Families take turns in preparing his food and in sending it to him. Other people brought straw and poles, and made a rude hut for him large enough to contain himself and the grave of his mother. I went to see him when he had already been at it self-proclaimed task nearly seven months, and I found him looking as well as usual, and in the hut there were three well kept graves, those of his father, brother and wife, and inside that of his mother. I opened the bundle of straw and twice which does duty as a door and had a look
